IV. EXPERIENCE GAINED:

- I have experience in handling, gross examination description of specimen and dissections and taking appropriate section for microscopic examination of specimens.

- I understand branches of anatomical pathology and the role of anatomical pathology in diagnosis and patient management
- I'm able to independently report routine histopathology and cytopathology and realise their own limitations and when to refer cases for further opinion
- I can offer expert opinion to clinicians as to the choice of biopsy material most likely to yield relevant information for the suspected disease process being investigated
- I can liaise with clinicians, explain the limitations of biopsies and cytological preparations in the interpretation of results and formulate clinicopathological correlations
- I have sufficient knowledge and personal communication skills to regularly participate in clinico-pathological review meetings
- I have sufficient knowledge of laboratory procedures to be able to "trouble-shoot" problems, including accessioning problems, artifacts, staining problems etc. to ensure accurate and talk to scientific staff about the laboratory and its problems
- I have a working knowledge of laboratory management procedures and be able to deal with staff problems
- I'm aware of how a laboratory budget is formulated and how their own practice, including selective requests for special procedures might impact on a laboratory budget, and the possible "adverse" budgetary effects of indiscriminate ordering of tests (both internal and external to the laboratory).
- I understand the need for, and principles of, continuing education and participation in CPDP
- I prepared and able to offer guidance and teaching to trainees in anatomical pathology.
